Graduate Program in

KINESIOLOGY, HEALTH AND SPORT STUDIES

MASTER OF ARTS IN TEACHING HEALTH EDUCATION

INTRODUCTION

The Master’s of Arts in Teaching Health Education degree is designed for individuals with a Bachelor’s degree in a non-teaching field to attain a Master’s degree, while simultaneously attaining a Michigan teaching certificate with a major in health education. The degree is intended for those wishing to enter the field of education from another profession. The degree is comprised of three sequential groups of courses: post-bachelor prerequisite courses (30 credits), teacher certification courses (34 credits), and Master’s degree finalization courses (7 credits). After completion of the post-bachelor prerequisite courses, students apply to the College of Education as a formal graduate student, develop a graduate plan of work, and complete the remaining to areas of coursework. Students attain teacher certification after the teacher certification courses and typically seek teaching employment and complete the Master’s finalization coursework while teaching.

PROGRAM FOCUS

This program prepares students for the teaching profession or academic studies in health education. Students in this degree program study: program design, implementation, evaluation, instructional methodologies; teacher education; and curriculum through a combination of intensive practical and research activities.

ADMISSION REQUIREMENTS

For admission into this program, students must: have attained a Bachelor’s degree in any non-teaching field from a credible 4-year college or university, and have held an undergraduate GPA of 3.0 or higher.

INFORMATION

Further information may be obtained by calling the Division of KHS at (313) 577-4265 to request a packet of information, by visiting the Division Website at http://www.kinesiology.wayne.edu/, or by writing:

Graduate Program in Kinesiology, Health and Sport Studies

265 Matthaei Building
Wayne State University
Detroit, MI 48202

Wayne State University is an equal opportunity/affirmative action employer
Wayne State University -- People working together to provide quality service